$1.6 Million Slashed Off Bill By Governor's Veto

COLUMBUS, July 29 — Gov. Frank Lausche vetoed nine items, totaling $1,636,000, in the $99 million additions and betterments bill today, as the longest and most expensive legislature in the state's history came back to Columbus for its final adjournment session.

The newest veto, coupled with the three disapprovals he registered yesterday, boosted to seven the number of vetoes the members of Ohio's first billion-dollar legislature found on their desks. The governor signed into law the bill increasing the local government fund from $12 to $18 million a year. The two last-minute actions left only three of the 110 bills passed in the last hectic days of the working session which ended July 15 still on the governor's desk.

They are the bills to permit the state auditor to pre-audit poor relief expenditures and

Mr. Weatherman Claims Cooler Weather Is Ahead

Mr. Weatherman has said it before and he has been wrong. But it is good news. He says cooler weather is on the way.

Although still perspiring in the last and worst throes of the current wave, the weatherman stated flatly Friday morning that lower temperatures and less humid conditions are due by Friday night or by Saturday sure.

The forecaster said the north portion of the state will feel the first effects of a cooler air mass moving in from the Pacific Northwest. He added that the cooler weather will extend into the south portion by Saturday night at the latest.

The more pleasant conditions, accompanied by brief showers at intervals, will last through the weekend, he said, but a return to uncomfortable, hot weather is expected the first part of next week.

The forecast for a change did little, however, to comfort still sweltering Ohioans. Temperatures in the 90s were expected for the sixth consecutive day, again accompanied by oppressive humidity.

HOWEVER, some consolation could be drawn from the fact that Ohioans are not alone in their discomfort. Virtually the entire eastern half of the nation is suffering from the scorching heat.

The weather bureau's five-day forecast follows:

"Becoming slightly cooler north portion Saturday and in south portion Saturday night or Sunday. Warmer Monday. Little change thereafter. Temperatures will average near normal north and three to four degrees above normal south portion. Showers about Monday and in

Sailors Report Dust Storm In Atlantic Ocean

BOSTON, July 29—A dust storm was reported sweeping the Atlantic Ocean today at a point halfway between Bermuda and Boston.

News of the phenomenon reached first naval district in a dispatch from Lt. Comm. Andrew Hepburn of Concord, aboard the U. S. Destroyer Livermore bringing home 300 naval reserve crews. The dispatch said:

"Large patches of dust covered the sea as far as the eye could see."

The dust storm at sea was unexplainable even to naval veterans aboard the destroyer.

Hepburn also told of "areas of sponges seemingly ripped from their homes by a giant hand."

A report of the dust storm was sent to the U. S. Hydrographic Office in Washington.

LAUSCHE WAS expected to permit the last two measures to become law without his signature. Whether he vetoes the pre-audit bill remained to be seen as the time for the last gavel to fall drew nigh.

The governor late yesterday vetoed the uniform municipal court bill, a bill to license aircraft on a per-passenger basis, and a bill to change the name of county "Soldiers' Relief Commissions" to "County Veterans' Commissions."

He signed three more bills, including the measure cutting the number of state job classifications from some 1,500 to less than 800, and standardizing rates of pay for the new classifications. The bill means a pay raise of about $2 million a year overall to state workers, although some may get slight decreases.

In vetoing the municipal court bill, the governor declared that "the general objectives of the bill are extremely laudable and highly desirable," but that "as finally enacted it failed substantially to attain its goal."

Lausche charged there were numerous examples of "non-conformity" in the measure; that it changed the territorial jurisdiction of some of the 39 established courts, and that some of the 11 new courts were created "in areas where they are not needed or desired."

The governor also said the bill "would impose new and unnecessary" (Continued on Page Two)

Sky Gimmick Seen; Eye Check Is Recommended

A Bellefontaine couple Tuesday reported seeing a "chameleon-like planet, or something, with a tear-drop shape" in the night skies.

Friday, the couple was advised to make a friendly visit with their favorite optometrist.

The advice was given by Harry Hill of Park Place, who reported he had seen the "phenomenon" three nights in a row.

Hill said he had been looking into the southeastern sky the first night when he observed a "pendant-shaped brilliant object which vibrated changed colors continuously."

The Circleville man said he was reticent about mentioning what he had seen at the time because he thought he would be ridiculed.

On the third night, however, Hill said he closed his right eye to "line up" the object, and that it had disappeared. He said he opened the eye and the "phenomenon" appeared again.

The man said he then directed his gaze at a distant bright light and found the performance duplicated.

Hill pointed out that he could not determine what Mr. and Mrs. Mac Hord of near Bellefontaine had seen, of course, but that "I recommend they have their eyes checked."

PEOPLE POORLY PREPARED FOR DEMOCRACY

Thomas Mann Says German Occupation Must Be Continued Another 15 Years

MUNICH, July 29 — German-born Nobel prize-winner Thomas Mann warned today that Western Germany must be occupied for another 15 years to prevent a resurgence of "militant nationalism" and assure the growth of Democratic institutions.

The world-famed writer and philosopher, now an American citizen, declared he does not think Communism will overrun Western Germany. He explained:

"If this ever happens it will be reason enough for the United States to declare war on Russia."

Mann said that it will be a "hard struggle" for Germany to become a Democratic nation because the Germans are "poorly prepared" for democracy.

MANN, probably best known as the author of "The Magic Mountain" and the four volume "Joseph In Egypt" series, said it has been "a moving experience to be on my native soil again."

Despite his love of his native land, however, Mann warned: "We must not let Germany stand alone for there is the constant danger of a revival of militant nationalism."

Mann was in Munich on his first tour of Germany since he quit his native land because of his opposition to Hitler and the Nazis in 1933.

He came to Frankfurt to accept an award in connection with the 200th anniversary of the birth of the German poet and philosopher, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe. Mann created something of a stir when he agreed to accept a similar award in the Soviet zone at Weimar.

The 74-year-old writer said Germany's hope of a Democratic future lies with its youth of 17 and 18-years-old. He said, however, that there are strong elements in Germany eager to support a Democratic nation.

MANN DOES NOT believe Russia wants war. He said of the Soviet Union: "She suffered too much during the last war and is very eager to build a strong socialistic system undisturbed as possible."

"If she had to choose between war with the United States and giving up Communist ideology I believe it would be the latter."

Mann emphasized that his acceptance of an award in the Soviet one does not mean he approves of Communism. He said the award is "unpolitical and has nothing to do with the Cold War between the United States and the Soviet Union."

He asserted: "At least in the cultural field there is understanding between rebuilding their country. He added:

"German culture has suffered from 14 years of terrorism and tyranny. Now it must make a fresh start."

Mann said he is impressed by the level achieved by newspapers in the American zone encouraged by U. S. authorities.

Allies Plan To Taper Off Berlin Airlift Monday

BERLIN, July 29 — The U. S. and British military governments announced today the historic 13-month-old Airlift that defeated the Soviet "starvation siege" of Berlin will be ended by gradual stages beginning Monday.

After that date the air supply service and installations will be maintained only at a level adequate to permit its revival at full scale "whenever the necessity arises"—meaning if the Russians reimpose the blockade that ended May 12.

The two military governments said rail, truck, and barge transportation to Berlin is now sufficient to supply all the city's needs, and that maximum practical stockpiles now are on hand.

Parents Are Guilty

Sentence Delayed; Retrial Looming

John and Adelaide Miller were found guilty of contributing to the neglect of their children by Judge George D. Young in Pickaway County juvenile court Friday. Sentence was deferred.

Defense Attorney Paul Adkins said a motion for a new trial would be made sometime Friday. His request that the $1,000 bond on the defendants be continued was granted by the court.

With presentation of his last rebuttal witness Friday, Prosecuting Attorney Guy Cline wound up the state's case against the Millers.

The witness, Mrs. Naomi Chaffin of South Pickaway street, told the court that she had been taking care of the Miller children during the time the Millers were in court. She said that Miller had come after his children one day during the trial and that he had been drinking.

MRS. CHAFFIN said that one of the children, Sue Ann, had marks on her body, and that the (Continued on Page Two)

World Conditions Said Dangerous

WASHINGTON, July 29 — Defense Secretary Johnson expressed belief today that President Truman's "arms-for-friends" program must be continued for four or five years.

Johnson's statement before the House Foreign Affairs Committee at hearings on the arms program was the first indication of how long the administration contemplates providing military aid to friendly nations.

The defense secretary said no one could predict the ultimate cost of the program, which would cost $1.45 billion the first year. Johnson said he believed the cost would decrease as the economy of recipient countries improved.

Earlier, Johnson urged Congress to give the President the broad powers he demanded for administering the program.

THE SECRETARY said that "any rigid limitations" on the President's authority to send weapons abroad could prevent quick action in an emergency and lead to "disaster."

Rep. Fulton, (R) Pa., criticized France's Gen. De Lattre de Tassigny who has been put in charge of ground forces for the Western European Union.

Fulton said the general "runs around in four cars, and is not the type to accept orders."

The congressman said he wouldn't like to see the general put in charge of ground forces under any unified command to be worked out in connection with the military aid program.

Girl, 4, Killed By Steam In City Apartment

CHICAGO, July 29 — A 4-year-old girl was found suffocated by steam and 90-degree heat today in the small Chicago apartment she shared with her mother and police held the building owner and janitor pending an inquest.

Police said Mrs. Anna Capizzi, 26, found her daughter, Louise, dead on the sofa in their apartment when she returned home from work at a cafeteria where she is a waitress.

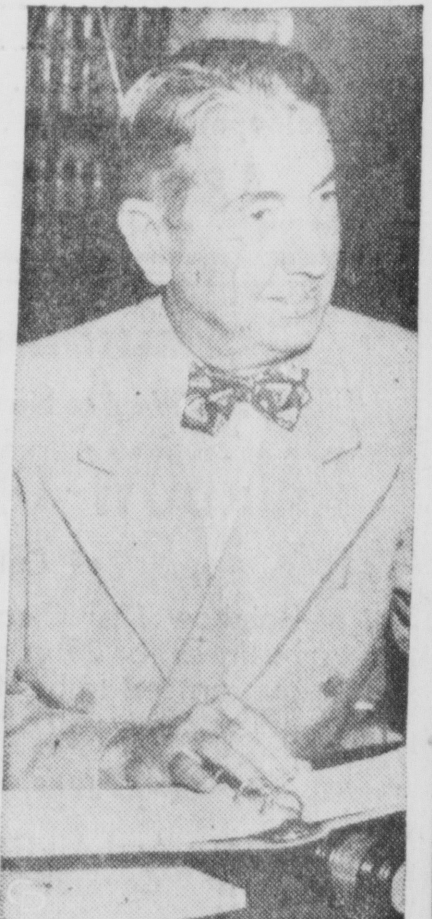

Police said steam had poured into the one and a half room apartment from "an improperly capped" radiator which apparently had been connected with the building's hot water boiler.

Police said the child apparently was awakened by the heat and had tried vainly to escape from the deadly steam.

An inhalator squad labored futilely for an hour and 35 minutes in an effort to revive the child.

In technical custody pending the inquest scheduled for later in the day were John Henik, 60, the building janitor, and Joe Braun, 55, who owns the building with his son, Joe Jr.

Police said Henik could offer no explanation as to how the radiator might have become connected with the boiler.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has announced in Washington that he has offered the post of associate justice of the Supreme Court to U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark (left), and the attorney generalship to Sen. J. Howard McGrath (right) (D) of Rhode Island. If they accept, McGrath may resign as chairman of the Democratic national committee, making William M. Ohio Polio Toll Hits 152; U.S. Total Is 6,339

COLUMBUS, July 29 — The state health department received reports of three new polio cases today from Portage, Butler, and Putnam Counties raising the total for the year to 152.

This compared to 162 in 1948 and 167 for the previous year which turned out to be the worst in Ohio history.

Leading counties were the same as yesterday: Cuyahoga, 25 cases; Hamilton and Montgomery, 15, and Summit and Darke Counties, 13 cases each.

The nation's polio toll, apparently stepped up by the hot, humid weather, mounted well past the 6,300 mark today and new communities planned bans on public gatherings and recreational facilities in an effort to stem the tide of the disease.

Latest complete figures from the nation's health officials placed the infantile paralysis toll at 6,339 persons stricken by the body-racking disease since Jan. 1. But the figures were running well behind the actual number of cases. More than 300 of the victims have died of the disease.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

As it must to all men. Let us go out with heads high. Let me die the death of the righteous, let my last end be like his!—Num. 23:10.

Mrs. Lester Harris is ill in her home at 229 East Mill street.

On and after Monday, August 1, the insurance office of Irvin F. Reid will be located at 137 E. Main St. in the room formerly occupied by Dr. G. W. Heffner.—ad.

Transfer of real estate, consisting of approximately 88 acres in Salter Creek Township, of the estate of Minnie Hiatt to Paul and Harold Horn has been approved by Judge George D. Young in Pickaway County probate court.

Legionaires, their ladies, and friends dance to the music of Hugh Jennings and his orchestra from 8:45 to 11:45 Saturday night at the Legion Home.—ad.

Paul Tatman of Laurelville was released on a $5 bond Thursday night after having been arrested for running a red light at the intersection of Mound and Scioto streets. Officers Mack Wise and Charles Scott took the man into custody.

There will be round and square dancing every Saturday night at Twin Elms Hall, South Bloomfield. Music will be by "The Melodians." Roy Harrington, caller.—ad.

A marriage license has been issued to John Daniel Eitel, Jr., 19, of Circleville Route 2 and Mary Sue Riser of Orient Route 1.

Milton Fullen has filed a petition for Muhlenberg Township trustee in Pickaway County board of elections office.

A chicken supper will be served, August 3, at Dutch Hollow church on Route 22 about 7 1/2 miles East of Circleville—sandwiches, ice cream and cake will be served extra.—ad.

Joe Noecker has purchased the Boyd Stout home on South Court street and will occupy in about 90 days. Stout is planning to build a new home in the Zwickler woods area in the northern part of the city.

Ronald Young, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Young of 229 East High street, is recovering from eye surgery in Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus. He is in Room 345.

For fresh fruits and vegetables come to Charlie's Drive-In Market, South on Route 23 at Logan Elm road. Charles Kreisel.—ad.

W. R. Bayes of Hayesville has been admitted to Veteran's Hospital, Dayton, for observation.

Sale of real estate of the Rosa A. Myers estate to the surviving spouse, William C. Myers, has been approved in Pickaway County probate court. The real estate consists of one half interest in a house and lot in Ashville.

The will of Clara M. Rugh, late of Madison Township, has been probated in Pickaway County probate court. The estate, valued at $16,100, is to go to Irvin Millar and Margaret Millar, brother and sister of the deceased.

Arlene McKinney of Mt. Sterling was fined $25 and costs by Mayor Thurman I. Miller Thursday for failing to yield the right of way on a Darby Township road. She was arrested on an affidavit filed by Richard Griffith.

child told her she had been whipped by her father.

Adkins renewed his motion to the court for dismissal of the case, contending that not enough evidence had been produced to prove the defendants guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Judge Young overruled the motion.

Adkins, summing up, said the Miller case would never have come to court if it had not been for the death of 11-year-old Arlen Miller.

He said the case became a nine-day scandal induced by the opinion of one man, Coroner Lloyd Jones, and an "unfortunate newspaper article following it."

He said that after this, tongues began to wag and vicious rumors to circulate. If the stories that were told had been true, he declared, the prosecuting attorney and the probation officer would have had no trouble finding evidence, but "it didn't come."

He pointed out that medical examinations of the children by doctors chosen by each side had resulted in a report favorable to the defense. The children were not found to be suffering from malnutrition.

CLINE ARGUED that the number of times the Millers had been observed intoxicated had a definite tie-in with their neglect of the children. He referred to testimony of witnesses concerning the occasions the Miller children had been seen foraging in garbage cans, and said that "children don't do that unless they are hungry."

Cline called the court's attention to checks which Mrs. Miller admitted signing her father's name to. He contended that giving a forged check in itself had something to do with child neglect.

Co-Defense Attorney George Adkins, silent throughout the trial, arose to present further argument for the defense. He contended that before the court could find the parents guilty of neglect, it must first be established that the children are neglected.

This had not been done, he said. As far as medicine, shelter, education and food were concerned no evidence had been produced to show that they had been withheld from the children, he argued.

Cline asked the court to find the defendants guilty. Judge Young took the case under advisement. His decision, read into the record Friday, was as follows:

"This court has given considerable thought to the evidence in the record and to the law applicable to cases of this kind. It appears that this court being a juvenile court, the laws of the State of Ohio established it to administer the juvenile law which is necessary and primarily concerned with the care and disposition of minor children, that is, those under the age of 18.

"However, in addition to that phase of the court's jurisdiction, the legislature has vested within the court jurisdiction in certain cases involving adults to determine misdemeanors charging those adults with contributing to delinquency, neglect, or dependency of any child.

"However, I wish to state in the instant case that if the evidence of the other offenses committed by the defendants were established, such would not fall within the jurisdiction of this court, but would probably fall within the provisions of the law that applies in adult court.

"In the case at bar the court finds the minor children of the defendant to be neglected children within the meaning of the law and under Section 1639-45 of the Ohio Code with particular attention given to the last sentence thereof wherein it states that each day of contributing to such dependency, neglect, or delinquency is to be deemed a separate offense.

"Therefore, the court finds the defendant, Adelaide Fissel Miller, and the defendant, John Orville Miller, guilty of contributing to the neglect of said children in the manner and form as each of the said are charged on the affidavit."

essary financial obligations on local governments."

THE GOVERNOR previously had vetoed the bill to restore quail to the game bird list for propagation purposes only, a bill to make it harder to restore to the tax duplicate property once exempted because it was used for charitable purposes, and the measure to increase the federal-paid salaries of referees in the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation.

The senate went into session this morning and was scheduled to take up most of the time confirming late appointments by the governor. They include several important posts filled yesterday by Lausche.

He appointed Ray O. Martin, 44-year-old executive secretary of the Toledo City manager, as a member of the state utilities commission. Martin, a Democrat, will serve a six-year term and will succeed Paul E. Welland of Lancaster.

He also appointed Clyde Moyer, Columbus, long-time highway department engineer, as the fifth member of the new strip mine reclamation board of review. Moyer will be the member experienced in earth-moving problems.

Lausche also appointed Baldwin Rice of Greenfield to replace Allen Rupp, Cambridge, as a member of what is now the State Conservation Commission but which, on Aug. 11, becomes the wildlife council of the new unified Department of Natural Resources.

The house was not scheduled to go into session until afternoon. It probably will be in the lower chamber where the decisions are made to "indefinitely postpone further consideration" of the vetoed measures, or to present the question, "shall the bill pass notwithstanding the governor's veto."

THE GOVERNOR vetoed the aircraft licensing bill because, he said, the license fee bore no relationship to the value of the plane, and—since the license fee would be in lieu of personal property taxes currently levied on aircraft—would cost the coun-

Youngstown was the only Ohio city to record any rainfall Thursday and it got only a drizzle. High and low temperatures at various points for the 24-hour period ending at 8 a. m. Friday were:

Canton 89-70; Chesapeake 97-71, Cincinnati 91-71, Circleville 92-70, Cleveland 92-74, Columbus 93-69, Dayton 90-72, Findlay 92-73, Mansfield 89-72, Parkersburg, W. Va., 92-69, Perry 92-73, Toledo 94-74, Wheeling, W. Va., 90-69, Wilmington 90-71, Youngstown 90-70, and Zanesville 92-67.

The Chicago area Friday was expected to swelter through its 22nd straight day of above-90-degree heat. That's only nine days away from 1934's all-time record.

when Gen. Lucius D. Clay, then military governor, ordered it.

GRADUAL SOVIET restrictions on ground traffic led to the famous multi-million-dollar operation.

The Russians pleaded that ties some $87,000 a year in such taxes now collected.

Lausche expressed regret that he had to veto the bill changing the name of the county veteran's commissions. He pointed out, however, that a technicality might prevent the commissions, under the proposed new names, from collecting the funds now levied for their support. The 1950 tax already assessed is for the support of "Soldiers' Relief Commissions," and might not be legally payable to "County Veterans' Commissions."

NEW YORK, where the thermometer recorded 95.2 Thursday, was expected to get more of the same with a "mid-90s" temperature predicted for Friday.

Weather Bureau officials said the western desert lands will continue to be the country's hot-box for some time. Coolest place to hide from the sun will be along the upper West Coast or in Northern Minnesota where a breath of chilled air is scheduled to advance from Canada.

Washington and Oregon temperatures are expected to take a dip from the middle 80s into the 70s.

But average temperatures for the rest of the country should be about 90. That includes most of New England, the South Atlantic states, and most of the Midwest.

"technical difficulties" prevented rail traffic into Berlin. No Allied official accepted this statement about damaged rails and weakened bridges as the truth.

Instead they branded it a "starvation siege" aimed at forcing the Western Allies to quit Berlin, which the Russians wanted as a new capital for a Communist Germany.

The Russian effort failed.

Clay calmly picked up a telephone, called U. S. Airforce headquarters at Wiesbaden, and said in effect "get to work—we are not going to retreat from Berlin."

It was costly to American, British and German parents and to taxpayers. By May 12 when the Russians lifted the blockade a total of 55 persons had been killed in accidents.

ded the general Johnson added that a "satisfactory working arrangement" on unified command will be achieved before any American weapons are sent abroad.

Johnson, testifying before the House Committee on arms aid bill declared:

"The realities of today's world, beset by impending danger of aggression now require the American people through their Congress, to understand and consciously entrust the President with authority commensurate with his increasingly heavy responsibilities for the security of the world."

THE DEFENSE secretary declared the cost of national security in "today's dangerous world conditions" is necessary.

Johnson said that the countries slated to receive weapons now have grave deficiencies in the equipment with which they are attempting to guard the "boundaries of the North Atlantic community."

He urged Congress to "act now to avoid loss of lives" which, he said, would be the cost of eventual liberation if Western Europe is not given the aid with which to resist attack.

solely be an attempt to muddle it?"

In Western opinion, the Soviet stand represented a last-ditch effort by the Soviet to block the U. S. proposal that fruitless atom control discussions be suspended.

In that connection, a closed-door meeting of the sponsoring powers, which include Russia, Britain, China, the United States, France and Canada has been called for Aug. 9.

All six have agreed, although Western sources see little hope of persuading Russia to abandon all-out opposition to the vetoless Baruch plan for the control and inspection of atomic energy. But the United States is anxious to grant the Russians one more opportunity to "let their hair down" in secret sessions away from the public eye.

Veep 'Kidding' About Marriage

WASHINGTON, July 29—Vice-President Barkley returned to Washington today amid speculation over whether the 71-year-old widower will remarry.

As he crowned the queen of the Culpepper Bicentennial at Culpepper, Va., yesterday, the vice-president remarked:

"I've been crowning queens for some time and while I'm in the mood I may crown one of my own one day and keep her."

Society immediately settled upon Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley, pretty St. Louis widow, with whom Barkley had luncheon last Sunday.

The vice-president told newsmen however that he was "only kidding."

Love Triangle Jails All Three

CHICAGO, July 29—Police reported a pioneer speed flier was stabbed in the chest with a broken bottle today and a woman was hit on the head in a fight aboard a yacht moored in Chicago harbor.

Police Lt. James Gorman said Theodore McCall, 45, of Gibson City, Ill., hit his wife, Elizabeth, also 45, with a whisky bottle, then slashed Arthur Carnahan, 45, of Bloomington, Ill., after accusing Mrs. McCall of being intimate with the flier.

Mrs. McCall was treated for a scalp laceration. Carnahan was stabbed above the heart but released after treatment in Western Memorial hospital. Police jailed all three.

Girl Slayer, 18, Freed By Jury In 39 Minutes

WAUKEGAN, Ill., July 29—Eighteen-Year-Old Joyce Schumaker, acquitted in the slaying of her married, middle-aged "after school" lover, made plans today to leave Waukegan and find a new life.

The girl, only 17 last April 4 when 53-year-old Carl Reeder was shot to death in his auto, was found "not guilty" Tuesday by a six-man, six-woman jury.

More than 200 spectators crowded into the Lake County circuit court room cheered the verdict, returned after the jury had deliberated only 39 minutes. Panel members said the first ballot was 11 to 1 for acquittal.

The second ballot gave Joyce her freedom. Thirty minutes later the happy girl, who said she quit school to evade Reeder, walked from the courtroom.

She said her plans for the future were uncertain, but her mother, Mrs. Edna Schumaker, said the entire family will move to a new city to help Joyce begin "living" again.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

"An eye for an eye," says the Old Testament, and down on the East Side these days there's a lot of talk about a big, sober-faced man named Tony Mirabella and his strict adherence to the letter of the Word.

Big Tony, so-called to distinguish him from his equally big son, Little Tony, has been running a butcher shop on Mulberry Street for 20 years and, in a neighborhood famous for its shootings and knifings, he has always been regarded as a decent and upstanding sort of gent.

As for Little Tony—well, ever since he was old enough to pound a cutlet, he's been helping his pop behind the counter, and it's always been taken for granted that he would take over when the old man decided to call it a day.

However, last year Little Tony decided to become a prize fighter and began hanging out at one of the gymnasiums on Second Avenue. And this as far as his father was concerned, was pretty much the same as if his son had gotten interested in larceny.

"Do unto others" don't mean hit a man in the face," was the way Big Tony put it. But the boy refused to listen, and when Jack Palardino, a small-time fight promoter, offered to manage him, he quickly signed the paper in front of him.

A week later, Little Tony won his first fight—a four-round preliminary at a small club on Long Island, and ditto the five bouts that followed, all set-ups looking for a fast ten bucks.

THEN SUDDENLY—too suddenly, some of the smart boys thought—Palardino matched him against a colored boy who was being talked of as a contender for Robinson's welter-weight title.

"Don't worry about him," Jake told Little Tony. "Keep in close and shoot for his head."

Well, it turned out to be bad advice. The colored boy nailed Tony every time he tried to come in close, and laughed at the couple of head punches the East Sider landed. In the first round he dropped him for a count of four, and by the end of round two Little Tony had a bad cut over his right eye, and his left eye was getting red.

The butcher's son was game, but the colored boy kept peppering his eyes, and along about the sixth round the fans started yelling for the referee to stop the fight.

Two rounds later he did, but by that time Tony's eyes were pretty much of a mess and he had to be led from the ring. When a doctor finally got Tony's right eye open, there was no sight left in it, and after

INTERNATIONAL SMEARING

A SENATE judiciary subcommittee has made public the testimony of an anonymous witness who charged that the secretariat of the United Nations, under the management of Trygve Lie of Norway, secretary-general, is terrorized by Communist agents to whom Lie is subservient. In doing so, this subcommittee has carried to almost its ultimate degree the reckless, inept headline-hunting which has characterized the operations of a few Congressional committees.

As far as the information given out by the subcommittee indicates, the testimony of this unidentified witness was neither confirmed nor documented. It has been bad enough to besmirch the reputations of fellow Americans on such dubious evidence. But the act of making public such unsubstantiated charges against the character of a distinguished foreign statesman and the international agency he directs is fantastically irresponsible. The subcommittee of course was within its proper bounds in hearing the witness, and would be expected to consider his testimony for what it might be worth and to give appropriate weight to it in reporting to the Senate on the legislation under study. But for what congressional purpose was the testimony made public at this time?

This incident will be a poor contribution to the prestige of the United States. It is easy to imagine the glee which will be found in the Kremlin, and the dismay in the capitals of the friendly Western nations.

FACT MIXED WITH FANCY

RECENTLY an American soldier who had been arrested by the Russians was released and came back to authorities in Germany with a tale of being starved, tortured and tempted in efforts to induce him first to reveal secrets and then to renounce American citizenship. Doctors said there was no trace of malnutrition to support his claim of starvation. No one would guess how much of his story might be true.

The incident may be important, or may not be. It ought to lead thoughtful persons to wonder about other amazing stories from behind the Iron Curtain. Some very strange things have been well established as facts, to be sure. But how much fancy is mixed with them?

Consider the state of mind of the person who throws things out the window of a moving automobile or truck or bus. He must be completely unconscious of what he is doing, and must blissfully hole the illusion that he is the only one who does it.

NEW YORK—Perhaps because of Teutonic overtones in his bloodlines, the conductor of this department has a habit of turning to the macabre and the dramatically depressing, when fashioning these little masterpieces. Thus, from time to time you may encounter here the violent, the morose and the sinister. Forgive us. The city is neither so dark nor quite so heartless as you may think.

The story of how Sou Chan started his restaurant up at 52nd street and Seventh avenue, hard by the territory where the strip-teasers and nautch dancers have taken over from the giants of jazz, is a bright contrast. The American Magazine tells it in part, and some of it bears repeating.

Sou Chan is an amiable Chinese of 41 who looks about 25. When last seen by this department, he was the hit of a remarkably genteel birthday party thrown for an erudite press agent named Abe Savage, a poor soul who will persist to the end of his days in trying to buy the fifth spade.

Mr. Savage is one of a large and unwieldy group of major and minor celebrities who haunt Mr. Chan's rice joint and visit his home. Fred Allen, David Rockefeller, Helen Hayes and Lin Yutang are others numbered among Chan's friends.

Whether his eating joint is of a higher quality than any other chop-suey house is a question for more expert gourmets than us. However, it is valued at $250,000 and he did hand out $12,000 in Christmas bonuses to his three dozen employees last year.

It was not always so.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

A problem raised by establishing the permanent headquarters of the United Nations in New York City is defining the "United Nations Headquarters District."

An agreement was reached between George Marshall, secretary of state, and Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, which was incorporated in legislation passed by the 80th Congress.

First of all was defined an area where the buildings are to be at the eastern section of midtown Manhattan. This agreement provided not only that the federal, but state and municipal governments—appropriate American authorities—should enter into similar binding agreements with the United Nations on the subject.

The United Nations has the right to own: 1. Short-wave sending and receiving radio broadcasting facilities which may be used for radio telegraph, teletype, telephone, telephoto and similar services; this is to include a point-to-point circuit between New York and Geneva;

2. These facilities (and some others specified) may be operated outside the Headquarters area.

3. Also a United Nations airdrome and postal service.

In a word, right in the heart of New York City exists a separate nation, with rights and facilities of a separate nation, which in time of war is independent of the United States by treaty. From this area spies could operate freely in time of war or peace; the United Nations itself could, for instance, use its own facilities to notify member countries of our war preparation activities.

I quote: "No federal, state or local law or regulation of the United States which is inconsistent with a regulation of the United Nations authorized by this section shall, to the extent of such inconsistency, be applicable within the headquarters district. Any dispute, between the United Nations and the United States, as to whether a regulation of the United Nations is authorized by this section or as to whether a federal, state or local law or regulation is inconsistent with any regulation of the United Nations authorized by this section, shall be promptly settled as provided in Section 21. Pending such settlement, the regulation of the United Nations shall apply, and the federal, state or local law or regulation shall be inapplicable in the headquarters district to the extent that the United Nations claims it to be inconsistent with the regulation of the United Nations. This section shall not prevent the reasonable application of fire protection regulations of the appropriate American authorities."

The Hawaiian longshoremen's strike has added weight to the arguments for a general power, in the hands of government at all times, to control a strike which endangers public health or safety, or otherwise damages public welfare. The strike in Hawaii has completely paralyzed water traffic to and from the Islands.

France, which has already suffered much in regard to its colonial empire, has undergone another loss. The three-square-mile town of Chandernagore in India has voted to cut its ties with France and join the new nation of India. Four other settlements of French India will vote on separation in December.

Painful Spinal Disease Which Attacks Healthy Young Men

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THERE is an extremely painful disorder of the spine known as rheumatoid spondylitis which seems to pick its victims especially among otherwise healthy young men.

In the beginning, the pain which is a big feature of this disease is usually limited to the lower part of the back. Those afflicted describe it as sharp and stabbing and note that it occurs only at intervals with some tendency to be worse at night. Occasionally it may pass into the legs.

Pain Becomes Constant
As the disease continues, the pain becomes more constant and more severe. Then there may be some stiffness of the lower part of the back and later of the entire spine. Often the hips and shoulders are affected. As the stiffness progresses, the pain decreases, though a dull, aching discomfort may persist to flare up in an acute attack of pain from time to time, particularly after exercise or strain.

Other symptoms, such as sleeplessness, loss of weight and poor appetite, are common in this condition. Frequently, too, these patients become mentally depressed. In most instances the disease develops gradually and occurs more often in persons who are tall and slender.

X-ray examination is helpful in making the diagnosis. Often changes are noted in the joints between the lowest part of the spine and the hip bone. The ligaments which hold the bones of the spine together may become calcified, that is, lime salts may be deposited in them.

In treating this disorder, three things are necessary to relieve the pain, to prevent deformity of the spine and to build up the patient's general health.

The latter requires rest and a diet rich in all the necessary food parts, supplemented by vitamins.

X-Ray Treatment
It is important that efforts be made to keep the patient from becoming apprehensive and depressed. It has been suggested that X-ray treatments over the back may be effective in controlling the pain. Pain-relieving preparations also may be used under the direction of the physician.

In helping to correct deformities of the spine, exercises are advised. If the patient is confined to bed, his back should be supported during this period and only a small pillow is allowed for the head. Occasionally a brace or belt may be of help in relieving the pain.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

P. F.: What are the symptoms of chronic appendicitis? Is there any treatment except operation?

Answer: Chronic appendicitis may cause pain in the lower right part of the abdomen. There may be occasional attacks of constipation or diarrhea. There may be fever, and the number of white cells in the blood may be increased. Operation is the only form of treatment available.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

FOR THE rest of the way, Kit and Furse each was preoccupied with a section of the newspaper.

The conductor poked his head in the door of the coach and shouted two syllables that the rush of air promptly threw back over his shoulder. Kit smoothed on her gloves and drew her overnight bag on to her knees. As the train slowed down, Furse reached for her bag and stood up to let her pass him.

Audrey was waiting for her on the platform. "Peter's meeting me, want a lift?"

"No, thank you," said Kit in a low voice. "If my father's not here, Mr. Furse will drive me up the hill. It's on his way."

Audrey gave a meaningful glance at Furse over her shoulder. Her eyes lingered on him. She whispered back, "I'll see you this weekend."

Furse's car had a musky smell of apples. Kit sniffed delightedly. "It's nice of you to take me," she said as they swung the half arc around the station. "It will save Marvell a trip."

"What will you do if he's not home?"

"Ask you for supper!"

"That would be a god-send," he said hopefully.

"Seriously, though, he's never out and if he is it doesn't matter. I'll fix up something and then go out for a walk in the woods. I love them this time of day. But then I like it here—always! You see that's why I had to come home. To give Marvell a surprise and to find everything just the same for myself! We have a dramatic teacher at Holly, she was a great actress once, now she's kind of old and scornful. Once when a few of us had just thrown ourselves in to a scene, she told us, 'Don't strain for a great variety of passion—you haven't got it and you don't need it. Remember there are only two emotions to call forth in an audience—the feeling of surprise and the feeling of familiarity.'"

They were almost at the head of the land and Furse was slowing down. "Which do you think is the best?" he asked.

"Don't drive in, just let me out here." She was thinking of an answer. "It depends who you are feeling for. With you..." she smiled and hesitated. "...you'll have to guess that. Thanks a lot. Will we see you soon?"

"Yes, I'll be over. Are you sure, again he looked uneasy, 'you don't want me to come in with you?'"

"Oh, no, we'll invite you specially."

"Soon!" he called above the heavy beat of the motor.

The pale, leaning birches welcomed her; the dried ragged grasses murmured a greeting. Through the lacy screen of the budding trees that met overhead gleamed the translucent evening sky. She remained perfectly still for a moment. How can I love it all? she asked herself. There were so many kinds of love—the pity she felt for Audrey, the security she felt with Furse, the impersonal, oh, so tender love she had for this place—the young green trees, the quiet earth, the thin sky ready to burst open with stars. Time was a wave breaking at its whitest crest of foam. She started to run as if grasp, and headed cross-country with the speed of a gazelle. The sheriff, a kindly—and lazy—soul, marveled at the old boy's agility, and said, "Let's let him go."

Five days passed, however, and the moonshiner failed to return. Just as his relatives and neighbors were concluding that his unusual exertions had been the death of him, he stumbled home in a state of complete disrepair. "Where you been, Beau-regard?" asked his partner. The moonshiner answered simply, "I been comin' back."

Fred Babcock, the Chicago socialite and literature, explains the difference between a shmoo and a schmo. A shmoo, it seems, is the inspired creation of Al Capp; a schmo is a fellow who can get it for you retail.

CHAN CAME TO AMERICA from Hong Kong in 1927. It was something he had wanted to do all his life; back in the little Cantonese village where he was born, America was called Gum Sun—

"There was a wonderful symphony, the Beethoven Seventh."

Marvell cocked his head at her. "And then the smell everywhere was so good and fresh, after the little rain, and I knew it would be better here and, oh, anyway, I had to come home!" She could see he was awfully pleased. "I saw Audrey on the train today. Oh, Marvell..." her voice dropped gravely. She told him the story of the two dollar bill.

"They didn't have much chance, those two, did they?" he said when she had finished. He had thought she might defend Peter, but she skipped right on.

"But the strangest part—she made me feel so wise, suddenly. Just the way—" she paused and then asked—"I suppose the milk's down cellar? I saw Poldi had milked."

"Yes, she came early." Kit felt that if she did not speak of Poldi again she would burst. She went on with a blush, "I suppose she'd have to leave early, too, wouldn't she? It's a long walk home for her from the brook through the pasture."

Marvell was on the top step of the cellar stairs. He turned around and asked quietly, "Do I, by any chance, make you feel wiser today, too?"

She shook her head and lifted the cover from the boiling pot. If the wave of steam had not engulfed her, he might have seen her eyes fill with sudden tears.

In the night the thin paneled door that separated their rooms became a sounding board for Kit's and Marvell's restlessness. Marvell was worried. She must have seen them down by the brook. He almost groaned aloud. Why hadn't he had the sense to realize she might come home some Friday? Now it looked so secretive, so ugly.

Now it looked so secretive, so ugly. He sat bolt upright. She had gotten up, he could hear a board creak. Hunched up, every nerve tense, he listened in apprehension as one might for a sick child's cry. A yellow crack appeared beneath the door. She must be reading. Slowly he eased himself down into the bed. I could talk to her, he thought, punching the linden pillow into shape, we've never been closer than now. Ever since she took that flyer to Proctor. But it's such a waste, he told himself fiercely, why make more of it to her? We'll be leaving, as soon as Kit's through that school, we're off. That was the trouble. Time was running out and now that he was almost free of the place here, he could see how small and insignificant a world he'd lived in.

And waiting made him restless—it always had. Waiting for something to begin. Kit's life, not his. But waiting just the same. And Poldi was the only real thing in it, because she was temporary. She was so close now. No regret or doubt or sickly impatience. Kit would understand that, but it must have hurt her stumbling up on him that way. Her father and Poldi, almost her own age. If she should think it ugly and never quite forgive him that he had made it so!

It was so easy to shock someone unawares, to hurt without violence. He mustn't make anything of it, and she would pass it by. Kit, he cried silently, it has nothing to do with you, nothing at all. When you need to know that, I'll tell you.

INTERNATIONAL SMEARING

A SENATE judiciary subcommittee has made public the testimony of an anonymous witness who charged that the secretariat of the United Nations, under the management of Trygve Lie of Norway, secretary-general, is terrorized by Communist agents to whom Lie is subservient. In doing so, this subcommittee has carried to almost its ultimate degree the reckless, inept headline-hunting which has characterized the operations of a few Congressional committees.

As far as the information given out by the subcommittee indicates, the testimony of this unidentified witness was neither confirmed nor documented. It has been bad enough to besmirch the reputations of fellow Americans on such dubious evidence. But the act of making public such unsubstantiated charges against the character of a distinguished foreign statesman and the international agency he directs is fantastically irresponsible. The subcommittee of course was within its proper bounds in hearing the witness, and would be expected to consider his testimony for what it might be worth and to give appropriate weight to it in reporting to the Senate on the legislation under study. But for what congressional purpose was the testimony made public at this time?

This incident will be a poor contribution to the prestige of the United States. It is easy to imagine the glee which will be found in the Kremlin, and the dismay in the capitals of the friendly Western nations.

FACT MIXED WITH FANCY

RECENTLY an American soldier who had been arrested by the Russians was released and came back to authorities in Germany with a tale of being starved, tortured and tempted in efforts to induce him first to reveal secrets and then to renounce American citizenship. Doctors said there was no trace of malnutrition to support his claim of starvation. No one would guess how much of his story might be true.

The incident may be important, or may not be. It ought to lead thoughtful persons to wonder about other amazing stories from behind the Iron Curtain. Some very strange things have been well established as facts, to be sure. But how much fancy is mixed with them?

Consider the state of mind of the person who throws things out the window of a moving automobile or truck or bus. He must be completely unconscious of what he is doing, and must blissfully hole the illusion that he is the only one who does it.

NEW YORK—Perhaps because of Teutonic overtones in his bloodlines, the conductor of this department has a habit of turning to the macabre and the dramatically depressing, when fashioning these little masterpieces. Thus, from time to time you may encounter here the violent, the morose and the sinister. Forgive us. The city is neither so dark nor quite so heartless as you may think.

The story of how Sou Chan started his restaurant up at 52nd street and Seventh avenue, hard by the territory where the strip-teasers and natch dancers have taken over from the giants of jazz, is a bright contrast. The American Magazine tells it in part, and some of it bears repeating.

Sou Chan is an amiable Chinese of 41 who looks about 25. When last seen by this department, he was the hit of a remarkably genteel birthday party thrown for an erudite press agent named Abe Savage, a poor soul who will persist to the end of his days in trying to buy the fifth spade.

Mr. Savage is one of a large and unwieldy group of major and minor celebrities who haunt Mr. Chan's rice joint and visit his home. Fred Allen, David Rockefeller, Helen Hayes and Lin Yutang are others numbered among Chan's friends.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

A problem raised by establishing the permanent headquarters of the United Nations in New York City is defining the "United Nations Headquarters District."

An agreement was reached between George Marshall, secretary of state, and Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, which was incorporated in legislation passed by the 80th Congress.

First of all was defined an area where the buildings are to be at the eastern section of midtown Manhattan. This agreement provided not only that the federal, but state and municipal governments—appropriate American authorities—should enter into similar binding agreements with the United Nations on the subject.

The United Nations has the right to own: 1. Short-wave sending and receiving radio broadcasting facilities which may be used for radio telegraph, teletype, telephone, telephoto and similar services; this is to include a point-to-point circuit between New York and Geneva;

2. These facilities (and some others specified) may be operated outside the Headquarters area.

3. Also a United Nations airdrome and postal service.

In a word, right in the heart of New York City exists a separate nation, with rights and facilities of a separate nation, which in time of war is independent of the United States by treaty. From this area spies could operate freely in time of war or peace; the United Nations itself could, for instance, use its own facilities to notify member countries of our war preparation activities.

I quote: "No federal, state or local law or regulation of the United States which is inconsistent with a regulation of the United Nations authorized by this section shall, to the extent of such inconsistency, be applicable within the headquarters district. Any dispute, between the United Nations and the United States, as to whether a regulation of the United Nations is authorized by this section or as to whether a federal, state or local law or regulation is inconsistent with any regulation of the United Nations authorized by this section, shall be promptly settled as provided in Section 21. Pending such settlement, the regulation of the United Nations shall apply, and the federal, state or local law or regulation shall be inapplicable in the headquarters district to the extent that the United Nations claims it to be inconsistent with the regulation of the United Nations. This section shall not prevent the reasonable application of fire protection regulations of the appropriate American authorities."

The Hawaiian longshoremen's strike has added weight to the arguments for a general power, in the hands of government at all times, to control a strike which endangers public health or safety, or otherwise damages public welfare. The strike in Hawaii has completely paralyzed water traffic to and from the Islands.

France, which has already suffered much in regard to its colonial empire, has undergone another loss. The three-square-mile town of Chandernagore in India has voted to cut its ties with France and join the new nation of India. Four other settlements of French India will vote on separation in December.

DIET AND HEALTH

Painful Spinal Disease Which Attacks Healthy Young Men

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THERE is an extremely painful disorder of the spine known as rheumatoid spondylitis which seems to pick its victims especially among otherwise healthy young men.

In the beginning, the pain which is a big feature of this disease is usually limited to the lower part of the back. Those afflicted describe it as sharp and stabbing and note that it occurs only at intervals with some tendency to be worse at night. Occasionally it may pass into the legs.

Pain Becomes Constant

As the disease continues, the pain becomes more constant and more severe. Then there may be some stiffness of the lower part of the back and later of the entire spine. Often the hips and shoulders are affected. As the stiffness progresses, the pain decreases, though a dull, aching discomfort may persist to flare up in an acute attack of pain from time to time, particularly after exercise or strain.

Other symptoms, such as sleeplessness, loss of weight and poor appetite, are common in this condition. Frequently, too, these patients become mentally depressed. In most instances the disease develops gradually and occurs more often in persons who are tall and slender.

X-ray examination is helpful in making the diagnosis. Often changes are noted in the joints between the lowest part of the spine and the hip bone. The ligaments which hold the bones of the spine together may become calcified, that is, lime salts may be deposited in them.

In treating this disorder, three things are necessary to relieve the pain, to prevent deformity of the spine, and to build up the patient's general health.

The latter requires rest and a diet rich in all the necessary food parts, supplemented by vitamins.

X-Ray Treatment

It is important that efforts be made to keep the patient from becoming apprehensive and depressed. It has been suggested that X-ray treatments over the back may be effective in controlling the pain. Pain-relieving preparations also may be used under the direction of the physician.

In helping to correct deformities of the spine, exercises are advised. If the patient is confined to bed, his back should be supported during this period and only a small pillow is allowed for the head. Occasionally a brace or belt may be of help in relieving the pain.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

P. F.: What are the symptoms of chronic appendicitis? Is there any treatment except operation?

Answer: Chronic appendicitis may cause pain in the lower right part of the abdomen. There may be occasional attacks of constipation or diarrhea. There may be fever, and the number of white cells in the blood may be increased.

Operation is the only form of treatment available.

she were sure something was waiting for her just ahead.

She flew around the back door and into the kitchen. It was empty. The oil stove thrummed a blue light and the scalded milk pail had been turned upside down on the table. Mrs. Crane must have just left for an evening in the village. Where would Marvell be? Not at Furse's at any rate, I wish he were! How self-conscious I used to be about Furse, Kit thought. I was so dumb in those days. Maybe he's gone to get wood or to see if the brook is filled. I'll go down that way.

Venus had risen upon the naked sky. Kit made a wish and started down the path to the brook. Halfway down, the path dipped suddenly and the heavy branches of a pine tree stretched forth a barrier shutting out the star. She reached to push the silky needles away when she heard a laugh. It floated up from the hollow just beyond like the silver notes of a song. It was so joyous and infectious that she laughed silently in answer. Peering between the boughs, she saw Poldi's sweater bright against Marvell's brown jacket. He bent his head to hers and Poldi laughed again. Then his voice, caressing, muffled, came up to her. "You are lovely, Poldi."

The light touched Poldi's eager, pretty face for a moment before Marvell's shadow covered it. Kit was hardly aware of Marvell. All she saw was the girl. Suddenly her eyes were filled with tears and she drew back silently. She was trembling a little as if she were chilled but at the same time the heat and heaviness of her body exhausted her. She wanted to throw herself down on the cool earth and cry. You would not know how fine it is, she whispered, seeking wildly for some promise to herself. She ran all the way back to the house and the queer tight pain she felt was not envy but exultation as if she had not seen the glory that had long been promised. "Thank you, Marvell," she wanted to say. It was as if he had shown her the way. In the silent kitchen she thought she could hear her heart beating loudly from every corner of the room. Stop it, she whispered, stop it, to her thundering, excited heart. Amazed at her quick, easy movements, she hunted out pots and pans, onions and salt pork. She would have a corn chowder and keep it steaming hot till he came in.

He came in, much later, whistling, but stopped, puzzled by the smell of cooking. "Why, Kit! This is great. What's up?"

She whirled around him—how could she ever keep still again—and kissed him lightly. "I'm making chowder. Does it smell good?"

And you might give me a glass of sherry while we wait."

"Of course. But how did you get here? I thought you were with Ben and Fanny."

"Mr. Furse drove me."

"Devil or Furse?" asked Marvell. "There's a rumor that he's out early this year picking partners for Halloween."

"It might have been," she grinned at him. "His ears were very pointed and close to his head."

Kit prepared a salad, sipping the sherry Marvell had poured. She hardly took a breath for talking.

Gifts Given In Novel Way

Miss Hazel Chilcote with Mrs. Carl Porter of South Pickaway street acting as assistant hostesses, entertained in her Saltcreek Township home at a bridal shower honoring Mrs. Jacob Maxwell Jr., the former Mildred Shaner of Kingston Thursday evening. The house was decorated with bouquets of garden flowers.

Mrs. Maxwell's gifts were presented in a novel way. Her horoscope predicting "a lucky day" was read just before the gifts were brought in.

Winners of the evening's contests were Mrs. Robert Bush of New Holland, Mrs. Lawrence Johnson of Circleville, Mrs. Jacob Maxwell and Mrs. Maxwell Jr., the honored guest.

BATHS GIVEN IN ICE COLD WATER

Resident Finds Old Order Changes While He Soldiers

Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of articles by William Miller, colorful resident of Muhlentberg Township, on the "golden years"—the gay nineties in Pickaway County.

By WILLIAM MILLER

We were out about five or six miles from Guayamas, scattered out in pup tents at the foot of some very high hills. As I remember, each did his own cooking and you had to scout around to get something to cook.

Some Columbus companies were ahead of us and suddenly the Spaniards began firing at them. The Spaniards were away up in the hills and all the glimpse I ever caught of them was going single file around a trail in their white suits trailing their rifles. Anyhow we were ordered up to support the first battalion and as we went forward we met struggles of the force ahead coming back through our lines. The Spaniards vanished and we went back to finish our cooking.

I WAS STRICKEN with typhoid fever a little later and taken to a makeshift hospital which was a tent with a blanket on the ground on which to sleep. I had a temperature of 104. Later I was moved to Guayamas and quartered in an old school building. There were no facilities to take care of the sick. No nurses, only soldiers acting as orderlies. No ice—nothing—all I had was warm goat's milk to drink in my old tin cup, and the flies were buzzing merrily around.

One doctor was all I ever saw and he did nothing but take my temperature and go "Tsk, tsk." What could he do? He had nothing to do with. I think there were about 50 in this one room, all typhoid cases which we had caught from drinking rotten water at Camp Thomas and in Porto Rico.

At Camp Thomas, they had open latrines and water pipes on top of the ground, sometimes running right adjacent to the latrines. It took someone with an iron constitution to withstand such a condition. This I did not have.

When all hope seemed gone Helen Gould (God rest her soul) bought and equipped in New York a ship which she transformed into a hospital ship and called it "The Relief" and dispatched it to Porto Rico. Our battalion surgeon was Dr. Wright of Circleville, brother of Ed Wright, former county commissioner. He managed to get Ed and I on this boat for return to the states. When they carried me on this lovely ship and bathed me and put me between two clean, cool sheets, I burst out crying.

The nurse who was standing by said "What's the matter soldier, don't you like it?"

"Listen, Florence Nightingale," I told her, "If you had been through the hell I have been through for the last six weeks you'd cry too."

My beard was six weeks old, and I looked like a Russian bear. Some of the group near me called me "Miller'ski."

ANYHOW WE sailed and that night the poor boy next to me died. He never got home alive. Many more died before we reached Philadelphia. When we docked, there was an immense crowd at the docks. Some women crying, some men cursing, but all saying words of sympathy, as two big policemen carried us one by one to the waiting horse drawn ambulances.

We were taken to the big city-owned Pennsylvania hospital and placed in wards. As soon as you hit a bed, here came a nurse with a thermometer. When she took my temperature, she did more than "tsk, tsk." She hot-footed it for an interne, as he couldn't believe the thermometer, he took my temperature again and then things began to hum. I guess it must have been (my temperatures I mean) close to 105-6-7.

Anyhow an orderly came in wheeling a bathtub full of water. Oh! Oh! I thought a nice warm bath. They stripped me and (believe it or not) gave me a big shot of whisky. Then the big orderly took me under the arms and the nurse took my feet and they gently lowered me into a bathtub of ice cold water.

I could hear it sizzle and the shock about stopped my heart. And then they put small cakes of ice in the water. I begged, I pleaded and I raved for them to let me out. I never went through such an experience as that in all my life. The nurse kept her finger on my pulse, and the interne kept his eyes on his watch. I don't know how long they kept me in there, but I think it was about four or five years.

When they lifted me out, oh, but I felt good. I was now as cold as I had been hot before, but they wouldn't let me have any covers. They took my temperature again. I think I must have been the thermometer kid. When the doctor looked at the thermometer this time he smiled. He would. I never heard of a treatment like that before or since to reduce a burning fever, but that is just what was done to me.

I slept that night, but the next day my temperature began to rise again. And this time when I saw the bathtub on wheels coming my way I knew what I was in for. Again I protested, but to no avail. In my weakened condition (I only weighed 90 lbs.) I could not protest too vociferously. I went through the same torture I had before.

WHEN I WAS lifted out of the tub this time I was completely exhausted and had not enough strength to lift my hand. But I seemed to get some better from then on. No medicine was given me, that I can recall, but in a few days I was able to take a little nourishment.

In about two weeks I was (so they thought) able to travel and was furloughed home. I still had the "bug" in my system and a few days after returning home had a relapse and was in bed three months under the care of my local doctor. I finally beat the "rap" and got on my feet again. This was owing to youth, and a strong determination to get well.

In the Fall of '99 being fully recovered I enlisted again in the United States Volunteer for service in Philippines. We arrived in Manila in December, '99 and I served all through the insurrection of Luzon, Samar and Leyte until June, 1901. But that is another story.

Coming back to Circleville I went to work at the New American Hotel as clerk for Ed Leveen. But things had begun to change. Automobiles began to appear, all big open cars, with a chauffeur and all belonging to men who had money. No owner attempted to drive his own car. The old order was passing. It had passed. So I close this article with a homesick longing for those ten golden years, 1890-1900 now passed, gone forever.

Cincy Counts 4

More Deaths

CINCINNATI, July 29 — Cincinnati chalked up a total of four more accidental deaths for the area today—three drownings and one fall down an elevator shaft.

Charles Miracle, 26, apparently stepped into an underwater hole while wading in the Ohio river off a Dayton, Ky., beach.

Meanwhile, the bodies of two 13-year-old boys missing since Wednesday were recovered from the east fork of the Little Miami river. They were Charles Cornwell and Larry Jones.

Fourth victim was Earl Drake, who apparently fell through an open first-floor door of an old-fashioned cable-store elevator at a downtown store where he was employed as a porter.

Barberton Man

Seeks State Post

COLUMBUS, July 29 — State Rep. John L. Smith, Barberton Democrat now serving his first term in the Ohio house, announced his candidacy for the office of state treasurer today, subject to next May's Democratic primary election.

Smith, 36-year-old ex-naval officer who was the leader of the freshman bloc in the house Democratic majority, is making his first bid for state office.

However, his campaign manager will be Clarence Knisley, himself a former state treasurer and veteran of many state campaigns.

Memorial Hall

Plans To Issue Rental Contracts

Rental contracts are to be issued to organizations who rent Circleville's Memorial Hall in the future.

The move was approved by directors of the Pickaway County Monumental Association during a meeting this week.

Mrs. Blanche Y. Motschman, chairman of the directors of the organization, pointed out the move was to be made in order to eliminate conflicts and misunderstandings.

She said the rental contracts would be issued to all groups which plan to use any portion of the Hall.

Harold Hill, superintendent of the Hall, said that all but one of the recommendations cited recently by a state building inspector had been complied with. Hill said the one remaining project was placing locks on the doors which can be manipulated from inside as a safety precaution.

Directors, Fred Trimby, Russell Liston and Reynold Greene have been appointed to make an inventory of the Hall in the near future, according to Mrs. Motschman.

Logan County

Seeks Coliseum

BELLEFONTAINE, July 29 — Petitions for a bond issue of $279,600 for a 4,000-seat community coliseum at the Logan County fairgrounds were being circulated here today.

The advisory committee of the junior fair board placed the petitions in operation. They are slated for presentation to the county commissioners.

I WAS STRICKEN with typhoid fever a little later and taken to a makeshift hospital which was a tent with a blanket on the ground on which to sleep. I had a temperature of 104. Later I was moved to Guayamas and quartered in an old school building. There were no facilities to take care of the sick. No nurses, only soldiers acting as orderlies. No ice—nothing—all I had was warm goat's milk to drink in my old tin cup, and the flies were buzzing merrily around.

One doctor was all I ever saw and he did nothing but take my temperature and go "Tsk, tsk." What could he do? He had nothing to do with. I think there were about 50 in this one room, all typhoid cases which we had caught from drinking rotten water at Camp Thomas and in Porto Rico.

At Camp Thomas, they had open latrines and water pipes on top of the ground, sometimes running right adjacent to the latrines. It took someone with an iron constitution to withstand such a condition. This I did not have.

When all hope seemed gone Helen Gould (God rest her soul) bought and equipped in New York a ship which she transformed into a hospital ship and called it "The Relief" and dispatched it to Porto Rico. Our battalion surgeon was Dr. Wright of Circleville, brother of Ed Wright, former county commissioner. He managed to get Ed and I on this boat for return to the states. When they carried me on this lovely ship and bathed me and put me between two clean, cool sheets, I burst out crying.

The nurse who was standing by said "What's the matter soldier, don't you like it?"

"Listen, Florence Nightingale," I told her, "If you had been through the hell I have been through for the last six weeks you'd cry too."

My beard was six weeks old, and I looked like a Russian bear. Some of the group near me called me "Milleroski."

ANYHOW WE sailed and that night the poor boy next to me died. He never got home alive. Many more died before we reached Philadelphia. When we docked, there was an immense crowd at the docks. Some women crying, some men cursing, but all saying words of sympathy, as two big policemen carried us one by one to the waiting horse drawn ambulances.

We were taken to the big city-owned Pennsylvania hospital and placed in wards. As soon as you hit a bed, here came a nurse with a thermometer. When she took my temperature, she did more than "tsk, tsk." She hot-footed it for an interne, as he couldn't believe the thermometer, he took my temperature again and then things began to hum. I guess it must have been (my temperatures I mean) close to 105-6-7.

Anyhow an orderly came in wheeling a bathtub full of water. Oh! Oh! I thought a nice warm bath. They stripped me and (be lieve it or not) gave me a big shot of whisky. Then the big orderly took me under the arms and the nurse took my feet and they gently lowered me into a bathtub of ice cold water.

I could hear it sizzle and the shock almost stopped my heart. And then they put small cakes of ice in the water. I begged, I pleaded and I raved for them to let me out. I never went through such an experience as that in all my life. The nurse kept her finger on my pulse, and the interne kept his eyes on his watch. I don't know how long they kept me in there, but I think it was about four or five years.

When they lifted me out, oh, but I felt good. I was now as cold as I had been hot before, but they wouldn't let me have any covers. They took my temperature again. I think I must have been the thermometer kid. When the doctor looked at the thermometer this time he smiled. He would, I never heard of a treatment like that before or since to reduce a burning fever, but that is just what was done to me.

I slept that night, but the next day my temperature began to rise again. And this time when I saw the bathtub on wheels coming my way I knew what I was in for. Again I protested, but to no avail. In my weakened condition (I only weighed 90 lbs.) I could not protest too vociferously. I went through the same torture I had before.

WHEN I WAS lifted out of the tub this time I was completely exhausted and had not enough strength to lift my hand. But I seemed to get some better from then on. No medicine was given

Cincy Counts 4 More Deaths

CINCINNATI, July 29 — Cincinnati chalked up a total of four more accidental deaths for the area today—three drownings and one fall down an elevator shaft.

Charles Miracle, 26, apparently stepped into an underwater hole while wading in the Ohio river off a Dayton, Ky., beach.

Meanwhile, the bodies of two 13-year-old boys missing since Wednesday were recovered from the east fork of the Little Miami river. They were Charles Cornwell and Larry Jones.

Fourth victim was Earl Drake, who apparently fell through an open first-floor door of an old-fashioned cable-type elevator at a downtown store where he was employed as a porter.

Barberton Man Seeks State Post

COLUMBUS, July 29 — State Rep. John L. Smith, Barberton Democrat now serving his first term in the Ohio house, announced his candidacy for the office of state treasurer today, subject to next May's Democratic primary election.

Smith, 36-year-old ex-naval officer who was the leader of the freshman bloc in the house Democratic majority, is making his first bid for state office.

However, his campaign manager will be Clarence Knisley, himself a former state treasurer and veteran of many state campaigns.

Memorial Hall Plans To Issue Rental Contracts

Rental contracts are to be issued to organizations who rent Circleville's Memorial Hall in the future.

The move was approved by directors of the Pickaway County Monumental Association during a meeting this week.

Mrs. Blanche Y. Mutschman, chairman of the directors of the organization, pointed out the move was to be made in order to eliminate conflicts and misunderstandings.

She said the rental contracts would be issued to all groups which plan to use any portion of the Hall.

Harold Hill, superintendent of the Hall, said that all but one of the recommendations cited recently by a state building inspector had been complied with. Hill said the one remaining project was placing locks on the doors which can be manipulated from inside as a safety precaution.

Directors, Fred Trimby, Russell Liston and Reynold Greene have been appointed to make an inventory of the Hall in the near future, according to Mrs. Mutschman.

DAVID SINGS SONGS OF TRUST

PSALMS EXPRESS RELIANCE ON GOD'S GOODNESS

Scripture—Psalms 34: 37; 46; 91: 138:3, 7: 143:8.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
THE AFTERMATH of World War II has left the world jittery, restless, fearful of what may be in store for it. After two dreadful conflicts, the hope of making a lasting peace seems remote, with nations contending against their neighbors in seemingly endless arguments.

David the king passed through many conflicts, experienced many sorrows, some brought on by his own mistakes or selfish, shortsighted actions. He, however, managed to retain his trust in the goodness of the Almighty and attain a serene outlook on his troublous life in spite of all.

In the Psalms allotted to our lesson today he registered his faith, and may we not also rely on his experience to secure a more hopeful outlook, with a resolve that we will, by our attitude toward life and our actions do at least a little to help our generation to make that "brave new world" we all so ardently desire?

"O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt His name together. I sought the Lord, and He heard me, and delivered me from all my fears."

For small children this lesson may be quite difficult, but one way to interest them is to ask of what they are afraid. Some would answer, "the dark," some "dogs," or other animals, neighborhood bullies, storms, etc.

Fathers and mothers can do much to allay such fears. They can point out that darkness is only absence of light, and that if a child is afraid of it, he can imagine he is looking at the room or the outdoors when it is light, and that nothing is changed except that all things are resting in the peaceful darkness.

The beauties of darkness—with perhaps the beautiful stars and the moon shining so softly down on all—can be used to interest him to learn of his universe and so banish fear.

Parents can explain that most domestic creatures are friendly to man, and if they are treated kindly, will respond. Trust is at the bottom of these attitudes. Trust in God.

David wrote of himself, "This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles."

"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him, and delivereth them. O taste and see that the Lord is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in Him."

In Psalm 37 David counsels: "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."

"Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: fret not thyself in any wise to do evil."

In Psalms 46 we read these comforting words which have brought fresh trust and faith to many troubled souls:

"God is our refuge and strength, a very pleasant help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea."

"Though the waters thereof be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swellings thereof, Selah!"

"In the day when I cried Thou answeredst me, and strengthenedst me, with strength in my soul."

"Though I walk in the midst of trouble, Thou wilt revive me: Thou shalt stretch forth Thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies, and Thy right hand shall save me."

If we would gain David's trust in God, and lean on it, and so trusting, do our very best to do what is right, "He will make thy righteousness to go forth as the light, and thy justice as the noonday,"—the psalmist says.

And, finally, in Psalm 145:8, David says: "Cause me to hear Thy loving-kindness in the morning; for in Thee do I trust: cause me to know the way wherein I should walk; for I lift up my soul unto Thee."

As we recall David's troubled and adventurous life; how he was forced to flee from home and hide in caves and other lonely, desolate places, in danger of his life, while his enemy, King Saul, had him hunted down, we can imagine his thankfulness to God who had been with him the time and had strengthened him.

PSALMS EXPRESS RELIANCE ON GOD'S GOODNESS

Scripture—Psalms 34: 37; 46: 91; 138: 3; 7: 143: 8.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THE AFTERMATH of World War II has left the world jittery, restless, fearful of what may be in store for it. After two dreadful conflicts, the hope of making a lasting peace seems remote, with nations contending against their neighbors in seemingly endless arguments.

David the king passed through many conflicts, experienced many sorrows, some brought on by his own mistakes or selfish, shortsighted actions. He, however, managed to retain his trust in the goodness of the Almighty and attain a serene outlook on his troublous life in spite of all.

Teen Tips

Girls and boys who never know what to do with their spare time are a sad and sorry sight. To hear them tell it, the world's a dreary, empty place without a thing for them to do except ask Dad for some money to go to the movies for the third time in a week.

You have eyes, hands, feet and think-machinery, haven't you? Use them! The world's full of millions of things that are fun to do. Some are fun while you're doing them—good for passing the time pleasantly. Some give you something to use afterward or to keep as a souvenir. Others teach you a skill or craft that comes in handy all your life for fun, an absorbing hobby or vocation sometimes developing unexpectedly into a profession, business or way of earning that necessary green stuff so useful in your bill-fold.

To help you decide what you'd like to do this summer, here are four types of pastimes to choose—

1—Collecting (things you'd like to own).

2—Activities (doing things you enjoy).

3—Sports.

4—Making (arts and crafts; creating or repairing).

Collecting can be bottles, insects, flags, silverware, movie star pictures, snapshots of places or people, rocks or minerals, dolls, puzzles, miniatures (animals, pictures, boats), sea shells, plants and seeds, jokes,

Retail Business Showing Decline Compared To '48

Business in Pickaway County showed a drop during the week ending July 16 from the corresponding period in 1948, according to a report of sales tax stamps sold here.

State Treasurer Don Ebright reported that tax receipts for the week totalled $4,183.37, as compared with $4,780.77 for the same week the previous year.

Collections in the county from the beginning of the fiscal year on July 1 to July 16 totalled $8,906.48. For the same period in 1948 the total had been $9,907.01.

Throughout the state all classes of industry showed tumbles from positions held the year before.

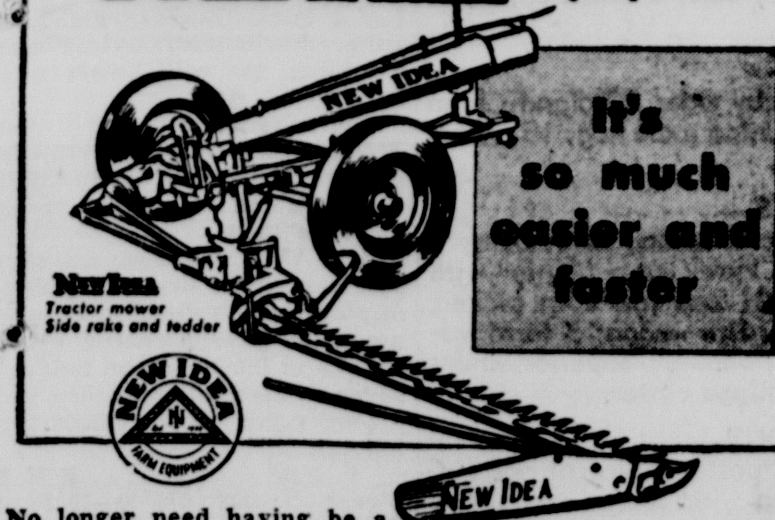

Sharpest drop was noted in chain stores with the total stamp sales for the week ending July 16 being listed at $417,929.88, as compared with $587,219.40 for the same week the year before.

Buttons, antiques, picture postcards, salt and pepper shakers, coins etc.

Activities—agriculture or gardening bee raising, cactus growing, camping, church or club work, dramatics, dog training, cooking, first aid, astronomy, magic, Indian lore poultry raising, puppets, typing, writing, Scouting (leader), chess, chemistry, bridge.

For tips on games for vacation fun, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Elinor Williams in care of The Circleville Herald.

Cards, Bums Ready For Donnybrook

Yanks Clip Tribe,
Retain AL Lead

NEW YORK, July 29—Another of those "crucial" series between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers will start in St. Louis tonight, with both teams primed for a donnybrook.

The league-leading Cards, who have the Indian sign on Brooklyn this year, are a game and a half in front of the Dodgers.

The Dodgers demonstrated that they have their batting legs on when they walloped the Chicago Cubs yesterday 7 to 1. They hit three homers, including a grand-slammer by Gene Hermanski which broke up the game. Big Ralph Branca notched his 11th victory.

St. Louis unleashed a 16-hit barrage in trouncing the Phillies 10 to 2 behind Al Brazle. A three-run double by Chuck Diering ruined Ken Heintzelman, who had beaten the Cards three straight.

Warren Spahn of the Boston Braves held the Cincinnati Reds to six hits and downed them 11 to 2. Ed Sauer of Boston had a perfect day at bat with five hits, and four other Braves hit home runs.

A TWO-RUN HOMER by Sid Gordon enabled the New York Giants to defeat Pittsburgh again, 8 to 6. The Giants advanced to fourth place, passing the Phillies.

In the American League, the New York Yankees increased their lead over the second-place Indians to four games by shading them 3 to 2. The relief pitching of Joe Page and a sensational throw by Cliff Mages in the ninth broke the back of a Cleveland rally.

George Stirnweiss of the Yanks led the attack on Bob Lemon with a triple and a double.

Ellis Kinder of the Boston Red Sox defeated the Chicago White Sox 6 to 1 for his 11th win of the season. Boston's Ted Williams hit his 26th homer and Dom DiMaggio hit safely for the 23rd consecutive game.

Detroit scored seven runs in the ninth inning to beat Washington, 13 to 7. Dizzy Trout climaxed the rally with a grand slam homer.

A scheduled night game between the St. Louis Browns and the Athletics in Philadelphia was rained out.

American Girl, 16, Is Confident She Can Set New Channel Mark

LONDON, July 29—A 16-year-old American high school girl, who will swap her four practice bathing suits for a coat of grease to challenge the choppy waters of the English Channel next month, expressed confidence today she will conquer the difficult France-to-Britain swim.

Shirley Mae France, of Somerset, Mass., who fancied herself a channel swimmer at the age of six, was given the "glad-hand" usually reserved for a Hollywood film star when she arrived at London's Waterloo Station.

News photographers and reporters swarmed on the train which carried the blonde, blue-eyed mermaid, who arrived earlier in the day at Southampton aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam.

Shirley, who was accompanied by her father, J. W. France, and a party of advisers, said she was out to beat the women's record for the English Channel crossing set in 1926 by Gertrude Ederle who negotiated the distance in 14 hours 31 minutes. Said Shirley:

"I'M CONFIDENT of conquering the channel. With all the luck I've been wished, I cannot fail."

Shirley will follow the course that proved unsuccessful for Mrs. Willi Croes Van Rijsel, a 31-year-old 175-pound Dutch housewife. Mrs. Van Rijsel was forced to abandon her challenge after she had covered 19 of the 21 miles from Cap Gris Nez, France, to Dover, England.

Shirley already holds the world's professional long-distance swimming title. She has the promise of a Hollywood film contract if the challenge is successful. She said:

"My first aim is to get across and my second is to beat the record."

Shirley has brought over four swim suits for her practice sessions but will not wear one during the attempt.

Like other Channel swimmers, she will be nude, but heavily covered with grease.

She plans to return to school for a couple of years and then to Hollywood—if all goes well.

Elroy Hirsch Stirs Up Tiff With Hornets

CHICAGO, July 29—Court action which threatened to crumble the foundation of baseball only a few months ago menaced professional football today.

This time, however, the football strangely seemed to be kicking itself.

The question involved was the so-called retainer clause.

In other words: Does a football or baseball team have the option on a player's future services after he has completed the terms of a written contract?

Former Wisconsin Halfback Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch says no. The owners of the Chicago Hornets of the All-America Football Conference shout yes, and are contemplating court action. Hirsch played three years with the Chicago Rockets, but when the Rockets spent themselves, moneywise and otherwise, Hirsch decided to have no truck with the successors, known as the Hornets.

ELROY LEAPED into the rival National Football League and signed a contract to play with the Los Angeles Rams. He has been told to report for training in Redlands, Calif., next week.

That could be the end of the story, but in this corner in purple trunks is Lee Freeman, one of the Hornets' owners.

Freeman says the Hornets have the first call on Hirsch since they have the franchise once held by the deceased Rockets. Freeman has put the incident before the All-America Conference's executive committee of Benjamin F. Lindheimer, Paul Brown and Dan Topping.

That action might become the blow for the resumption of undeclared war between the All-America and National Leagues.

The worst, however, could yet come. It is quite conceivable that the Hornets could lose a court suit against Hirsch and the Rams. The Chicago team might then find that Hirsch was not the only player lost.

Tinkers Enter Second Tourney

Tinks softball team has its work cut out for it Friday night.

The local softballers are slated to make their initial entry into an invitational tournament in Bremen at 7:30 p. m. Friday and also scheduled to play their second round game in the district tournament in Chillicothe at 9 p. m. Friday.

Paul "Snow" Seymour said that half the team would travel to each tournament, meaning that two Tink teams will be entered in separate engagements Friday.

The Tinkers are to open their invitational card at Bremen against Athens.

Derby Standouts To Meet Again

CHICAGO, July 29—Ponder, Capot and Palestinian, who finished in that order in the Kentucky Derby, top the field for tomorrow's $60,000-added Arlington Classic here.

More than 35,000 fans are expected to watch the three top three-year-olds compete against four other probable starters.

Listed as those probable were Admiral Lea, Johns Joy, Saint Nicholas, and Mr. Smug. If all seven go to the post, $66,450 will be awaiting the winner. Second money for the classic is $12,000 with $6,000 for third and $3,000 for fourth.

Williamsport's Final Spurt Nets Tourney Win

Williamsport capitalized on a last inning scoring spree in the district softball tournament in Chillicothe Thursday night to register a 4-3 win over Walnut Street church.

The Walnut Streeters opened scoring in the third inning of the encounter with a brace of runs and stretched their lead to 3-0 in the fifth with a single.

However, the Williamsport aggregation took the offensive in the last inning to score four runs on two walks and four one-base safeties.

Ed Gerber of the Walnut Street team turned in the most outstanding individual performance of the contest, Gerber, whose right arm has been amputated, nevertheless rapped out a triple and a single in four trips to plate, while fielding the ball with equal ease.

Herrnstein's, favored to take the tourney crown, squeezed out a narrow 1-0 shutout win over Yellowbud in its first game Thursday. The Herrnstein hurler was accredited with one-hit pitching.

Oiler softballers of Circleville will make their debut in the eliminations at 6 p. m. Friday against Mowreystown, while Tinks will attempt to advance into the quarter-finals at 9 p. m. Friday when they meet Belfast All-Stars.

Line score of the Thursday Williamsport win follows:

Wrspt.	000	000	4-4	7-5
Walnut	002	010	0-3	5-3

Merchants '9' Awaits Hebron

Circleville Merchants baseball team will play host to Hebron Merchants in Ted Lewis Park at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Both teams have records of eight wins in 11 starts in Tri-County League competition going into the Sunday contest, and both hold a tie for second place in the league with Pickerington.

The invading crew bested the locals by a 6-3 count on the Hebron diamond earlier this season.

American Girl, 16, Is Confident She Can Set New Channel Mark

LONDON, July 29—A 16-year-old American high school girl, who will swap her four practice bathing suits for a coat of grease to challenge the choppy waters of the English Channel next month, expressed confidence today she will conquer the difficult France-to-Britain swim.

Shirley Mae France, of Somerset, Mass., who fancied herself a channel swimmer at the age of six, was given the "glad-hand" usually reserved for a Hollywood film star when she arrived at London's Waterloo Station.

News photographers and reporters swarmed on the train which carried the blonde, blue-eyed mermaid, who arrived earlier in the day at Southampton aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam.

Shirley, who was accompanied by her father, J. W. France, and a party of advisers, said she was out to beat the women's record for the English Channel crossing set in 1926 by Gertrude Ederle who negotiated the distance in 14 hours 31 minutes. Said Shirley:

"I'M CONFIDENT of conquering the channel. With all the luck I've been wished, I cannot fail."

Shirley will follow the course that proved unsuccessful for Mrs. Willi Croes Van Rijssel, a 31-year-old 175-pound Dutch housewife. Mrs. Van Rijssel was forced to abandon her challenge after she had covered 19 of the 21 miles from Cap Gris Nez, France, to Dover, England.

Shirley already holds the world's professional long-distance swimming title. She has the promise of a Hollywood film contract if the challenge is successful. She said:

"My first aim is to get across and my second is to beat the record."

Shirley has brought over four swim suits for her practice sessions but will not wear one during the attempt.

Like other Channel swimmers, she will be nude, but heavily covered with grease.

She plans to return to school for a couple of years and then to Hollywood—if all goes well.

Former Wisconsin Halfback Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch says no. The owners of the Chicago Hornets of the All-America Football Conference shout yes, and are contemplating court action.

Hirsch played three years with the Chicago Rockets, but when the Rockets spent themselves, moneywise and otherwise, Hirsch decided to have no truck with the successors, known as the Hornets.

ELROY LEAPED into the rival National Football League and signed a contract to play with the Los Angeles Rams. He has been told to report for training in Redlands, Calif., next week.

That could be the end of the story, but in this corner in purple trunks is Lee Freeman, one of the Hornets' owners.

Freeman says the Hornets have the first call on Hirsch since they have the franchise once held by the deceased Rockets. Freeman has put the incident before the All-America Conference's executive committee of Benjamin F. Lindheimer, Paul Brown and Dan Topping.

That action might become the blow for the resumption of undeclared war between the All-America and National leagues.

The worst, however, could yet come. It is quite conceivable that the Hornets could lose a court suit against Hirsch and the Rams. The Chicago team might then find that Hirsch was not the only player lost.

Elroy Hirsch Stirs Up Tiff With Hornets

CHICAGO, July 29—Court action which threatened to crumble the foundation of baseball only a few months ago menaced professional football today.

This time, however, the football strangely seemed to be kicking itself.

The question involved was the so-called retainer clause.

In other words: Does a football or baseball team have the option on a player's future services after he has completed the terms of a written contract?

Former Wisconsin Halfback Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch says no. The owners of the Chicago Hornets of the All-America Football Conference shout yes, and are contemplating court action.

Hirsch played three years with the Chicago Rockets, but when the Rockets spent themselves, moneywise and otherwise, Hirsch decided to have no truck with the successors, known as the Hornets.

ELROY LEAPED into the rival National Football League and signed a contract to play with the Los Angeles Rams. He has been told to report for training in Redlands, Calif., next week.

That could be the end of the story, but in this corner in purple trunks is Lee Freeman, one of the Hornets' owners.
